Queen's University Library Guide to Choosing a Citation Manager

<https://guides.library.queensu.ca/citing-and-citation-managers/citation-managers>

Benefits

Makes in-text and reference list citation much faster and easier

Allows you to build a library of publications that you can keep with you through the years, from place to place

Gets students into the research habit (and maybe makes it more fun)

Where it is lacking

Specialized business resources – Statista, Passport – does not format citations correctly

However it is still good for keeping track of your sources, even if the citations are lacking and you can add material yourself; the snapshot has the essential data you will need to find the material again, and to upgrade the citation

Visit Zotero.org

The screenshot shows the Zotero.org homepage. At the top left is the 'zotero' logo. The top right navigation bar includes links for 'Groups', 'Documentation', 'Forums', 'Get Involved', 'Log In', and a blue 'Upgrade Storage' button. The main content area has a dark background with the headline 'Your personal research assistant' in white. Below this is the text 'Zotero is a free, easy-to-use tool to help you collect, organize, annotate, cite, and share research.' A prominent red 'Download' button is centered. Below the button, it states 'Available for Mac, Windows, Linux, and iOS' and 'Just need to create a quick bibliography? Try ZoteroBib.' The page is decorated with various colorful icons representing research and technology, such as a speech bubble, a document, a book, a grid, and a mail icon.
